Jimmy Smith was heading home early from a difficult day at work. The 64-year-old self-employed toolmaker couldn’t see with the clarity he needed. The precision tools he makes are used to cut the seals on solenoid valves and there is no room for error or asymmetry when the accuracy needed is finer than a strand of hair. With clouded vision, he couldn’t do the job, and he was disheartened at the thought of an early retirement.

When Smith saw his eye doctor years before, a minor cataract was detected. But during the summer, he noticed his eyesight was deteriorating. It was time for surgery and Smith looked forward to the idea of shedding the glasses he’s worn on and off for twenty years.

Dr. Martin Edwards at the Hartford Hospital Eye Surgery Center in Newington performed Smith’s surgery and implanted extended depth of vision lenses. The Johnson & Johnson Symphony lenses that Smith received provide close up and distance vision with no interruption in between.

Jimmy describes his experience at the surgery center as exceptional. “The entire staff was fabulous,” he recounted. “Everybody seems to enjoy what they do. The anesthesiologist explained everything. Dr. Edwards outlined all the steps he’d be taking. It was a great experience from every angle.”

Smith says the surgery not only restored his vision but enhanced his livelihood at work and at play.

“Without the surgery, I would have been forced into retirement. There are things I can do at work that I couldn’t do before,” he notes. “I’m very active with my ATV club and I also enjoy boating and snowmobiling. It sounds corny, but it was life changing. To not have glasses for the first time in 30 years is pretty exciting. It is beyond my expectations.”

Elinor and Grandma Beverly enjoy the living room at Cedar Mountain Commons.
Keeping Families Connected in Our System of Care

Colleagues at Hartford HealthCare often refer to the system as a “family” of healthcare facilities, service lines and business units. With more than 30,000 employees, however, there are many actual family members who work together under the Hartford HealthCare umbrella as well. Some of these family connections span several generations, as is the case with the Cohen family. One of the newest additions to the Hartford HealthCare family is Beverly Cohen. She recently moved into Cedar Mountain Commons, an independent and assisted living retirement community located in Newington, Connecticut that’s part of Hartford HealthCare Senior Services division. Beverly’s son is Dr. Jeffrey Cohen, the Executive Vice President and Chief Clinical Operating Officer for Hartford HealthCare and her granddaughter, Elinor Cohen, is a member of the HHC Media Relations and Marketing team.

“It’s been a wonderful experience for her and we could not be happier with my mom’s transition to Cedar Mountain Commons,” said Dr. Cohen about his mother’s experience since she moved in this past summer. “Living at a facility that is a part of the state’s largest, most comprehensive healthcare system offers many advantages, including the peace of mind knowing that she can be seamlessly connected to any type of care she may need. More importantly, my mom has been welcomed in to a warm and engaging community, made a lot of new friends and we know she’s in great hands with the staff there.”

Being connected to a trusted healthcare system is certainly an advantage, but for Beverly, she feels the sense of friendship, family and community she gets from living amongst her new friends at Cedar Mountain Commons is the best perk of all.

“Everyone here is so friendly and they all have such a positive attitude,” Beverly, who will soon be celebrating her 90th birthday, said. “It’s such a wonderful group of people and they have made me feel very welcome”

During a recent visit with her granddaughter Elinor, whose office in Newington is just up the driveway from Cedar Mountain Commons, Beverly reminded her that everyday should begin with a laugh because, she explained “laughter is the best medicine.” Everyone in the Hartford HealthCare family would certainly agree with that.

Cedar Mountain Commons, a member of Hartford HealthCare Senior Services, is a not for profit independent and assisted living community located at 3 John H. Stewart Drive in Newington. To learn more, visit http://cedarmountaincommons.org.
As many of us head home for the holidays, this is a time to spend with family, but also an opportunity to identify any support needs for our aging loved ones. If you do have concerns, you may be looking for somewhere to turn for guidance. A Geriatric Care Manager is a great resource to help navigate the healthcare and social systems and provide peace of mind to you when you’d like to be there, but can’t. Whether you are assisting from a distance or trying to balance caregiving with your career or other responsibilities, a Geriatric Care Manager can help support you and your loved one.

Signs that a Geriatric Care Manager is needed to help support your loved one:
- Missed medical appointments
- Difficulty navigating the health care system
- Fewer groceries in the home than usual (or expired food)
- Missed medications or medications not refilled
- Lack of or decrease in personal hygiene
- Change in the home environment such as clutter, mail piling up, odors...

Summary of Life: Guide to Obituary Writing

As the old adage goes “the only thing certain in life is death and taxes.” While many of us have experienced filling out tax forms (or hiring someone to do it) most of us have not been faced with the task of writing an obituary. To make this undertaking even more challenging, you’ll have to craft this written memorial while grieving for the deceased and must produce your tribute in short order, usually overnight.

Obituaries serve as a way to communicate the death of a loved one and to announce important information about funeral or visitation services. Keep in mind no detail is too small, write everything down. Try talking to and spending quality time with the deceased family members and friends, to give you a better insight of the deceased. Obituaries tell the story of the deceased and allow loved ones to celebrate and honor his or her life and legacy.

An obituary can be broken down into five parts:
- Announcing the Death
- The Biography
- The Surviving Family
- Service Information
- Special Messages

Announcing the Death
The beginning of an obituary is an announcement to let the community know that your loved one has passed away. It should contain information such as the person’s name, age, residence, and date of death. When you are announcing the death, phrases like “Passed away”, “went to be with his Lord”, “ended a long battle with...”, “died” or “surrounded by family” are all common and acceptable expressions to use.

The Biography
The biographical section of the obituary is the longest and most personal part. This is the section where you will summarize the deceased’s life. Use this section to highlight meaningful events, qualities, contributions and important connections they made while living. Consider getting help from friends and family members on this section.

Information that should be included in the biographical section includes the date and place of birth, parent’s names including mother’s maiden name, birth name of spouse, education, work, and military service.

The Surviving Family
It is always important to list the surviving family members when announcing someone’s death. These are the people who others can turn to offer condolences and help comfort as they say goodbye. When you are listing the survivors in order of closest relations. The order should go as followed: spouse, children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, parents, and siblings.

It should be noted that nieces, nephews, cousins, and in-laws are typically unmentioned unless they were especially close to the deceased. Also, grandchildren and great-grandchildren are usually numbered (“...she leaves behind 7 grandchildren”) instead of listing each person’s name.

When you are listing a relative, make sure to include their first name, their spouse’s first name in parenthesis and then their last name. If the spouse of the deceased has a different last name than the relative, also include their last name inside the parenthesis. You can also list any immediate family members whose death preceded the deceased. The format

Service Information
At the end of the obituary, make sure to include information about the upcoming service; your funeral director may provide you with this information. The essential information to include is time, date of service, location and the officiant’s name.

Special Messages
To conclude the obituary, it is common to offer special thanks, a short message or prayer. If your family would like to forego people sending flowers, this is when you would say something like “in lieu of flowers, the family asks that you make a donation to...”.

There is no “right” or “wrong” way to write an obituary. A well-written obituary not only will announce the passing of a loved one and clearly communicate the details of upcoming services, but it can also be a lasting tribute to a life well-lived and the legacy they’ve left to the world. You will be the most successful if you write it from the heart.
